Tough call. I'd rather go with the nice Clair-senpai than these tsunderes. Well anyway enjoy this double release courtesy of laziness and a hint of rage. Don't worry, I also had a big WTF as I read this chapter. Read, enjoy, patiently wait for the next chapter. Oh and yeah I know I'm supposed to add some notes on the chapter, but I don't wanna.

The figure consists of four vertically stacked histograms labeled (a), (b), (c), and (d). Each histogram shows the frequency of values for the expression $x_k^T A x_k$. The x-axis for all plots ranges from approximately -2000 to 2000, with major ticks at -2000, -1000, 0, 1000, and 2000. The y-axis represents frequency, ranging from 0 to 80. Histogram (a) corresponds to $k=0$, (b) to $k=1$, (c) to $k=2$, and (d) to $k=3$. All four histograms show a very similar bell-shaped distribution centered at zero, indicating that the quadratic form remains near zero throughout the iterations.
